Haldex appoints Åke Bengtsson to President and CEO

Åke Bengtsson has been acting President and CEO for Haldex since Bo Annvik left his position in March 2017. The Board of Directors has as of today appointed Åke Bengtsson to the role of permanent President and CEO.

“Åke Bengtsson has proved to be a strong leader for Haldex during the past seven months. Haldex has been exposed to severe strains during the public offer process and has, despite this, been strengthened under Åke's leadership. Åke has extensive experience from the manufacturing industry. He is strongly operation and business oriented with significant experience in change management of international operations. The Board of Directors is very pleased that Åke has accepted our offer.”, says Jörgen Durban, chairman of the board.

Åke Bengtsson was CFO for Haldex 2015-2017. Prior to joining Haldex, Åke Bengtsson served as CFO for the Partnertech group, a global industrial partner offering customized solutions throughout the product lifecycle, from product development to manufacturing and aftermarket services. Åke Bengtsson has previously held several leading positions at Cardo, Rexam and Rohm and Haas. He is 54 years old and has an Executive MBA from SIMI in Copenhagen, Denmark.

"I'm honored and excited to lead Haldex into a new phase where we will build upon the positive support we have gained from customers during the public offer process. We have clearly showed that we play an important role in the technology shift towards autonomous driven vehicles. Haldex will now speed up the execution of the strategic plan we developed last year.", says Åke Bengtsson, President and CEO of Haldex.
